
An Earnest Rehearsal

Laugh-provoking scene from "The Importance of Being Ernest" is rehearsed by Pat Pagan of Wyandotte (left); Carol Cole, 380 Linden, Birmingham; and William Wood of Charleston, Ill. The play will be presented by the Cranbrook School Ergasterion Club at 8:15 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the school in Bloomfield Hills. Other Cranbrook and Kingswood students from the Birmingham area who will appear in the light comedy are Ted Baldwin, 1750 Hillwood, Bloomfield Hills; Jim McDaid, 6791 Spruce, Birmingham; and Carol Cole.

Color in Fixtures Will Brighten Bath

While colored plumbing fixtures are becoming more and more popular, a smart decorating touch is to use a colored seat on a white water closet in the bathroom or powder room.

A colored seat makes it possible to brighten the bathroom interior by carrying the color theme to towels, bathmats, shower curtains and wall paper.

Food Supply Determines Habitat for Wild Animals

For all animals in the wild, hunger is life's most insistent demand.

Man is unique in that he is increasingly able to produce, preserve, store and transport his food supply. This not only insures his well-being, it also allows him to occupy a wide range of living space.

Mrs. Frehse

On the other hand the habitat of a wild animal is largely determined by its natural food supply. Any man-made changes may eventually result in the encouragement, the limiting or even the extinction of a species.

WITH THE first onslaught of winter, the food problem for our wild animals increases. Fruits and grains are harvested, much of the vegetation is frozen, lakes and ponds are covered with a forbidding layer of ice.

Animals can be classes in three groups according to their food habits. Carnivores live on the flesh of other animals. Herbivores live on plants while an omnivore will eat both plants and animals.

The herbivore often solves the problem of his winter's food supply by hibernating. Some animals, like the black bear and the chipmunk, are partial winter sleepers. But the carnivore with its taste for fresh blood usually goes on his murderous way undaunted by the elements.

BIRDS OF PREY (like hawks and owls), snakes, lizards, mink and weasels are among the smaller land carnivores. Larger animals belonging to this group include the wolf, polar bear, bobcat, tiger, jaguar, hyena, leopard, lion and cougar.

To insure the survival of the carnivores nature has endowed them with a highly specialized structure which includes keen senses and a body tuned to the swift pursuit of prey.

The larger carnivores are equipped with sharp, interlocking canine teeth for seizing and cutting up flesh, shear-cutting molars, a strong jaw hinge and enormous chewing muscles attached to ridges on the skull.

The jaw is short and strong and the feet are usually provided with claws.

OUR DOGS and cats are domesticated carnivores, which, during their long association with man, have become omniverous. Otherwise, the carnivora live only in the wild and are not generally used as food for man.

The herbivores include the large rodent family with such mammals as squirrels, rats, mice, woodchucks, beavers and rabbits.

Another important group here included is the ungulata to which belong the hoofed animals such as the rhinoceros, hippopotamus, elephant, giraffe, pig, deer and moose. Our domestic sheep, horses, cows and goats are also in this group.

The monkey, baboon, chimpanzee, ape and gorilla are primates belonging here.

AS A GROUP the herbivores have powerful molars for grinding vegetable matter and chisel-like front teeth for clipping grass. Certain of the Ungulata such as cows, sheep, deer and camels are called ruminants.

These have several stomachs as well as longer digestive tracts in order to digest the tough cellulose plant fibers which make up much of their food. Most of the meat-producing animals generally used by man are found in this group.

A number of wild animals including the raccoon, opossum, fox, skunk and the black and the grizzly bear have probably become omniverous in order to adjust to a wider living range.

MAN, THE highest of the primates, usually lives as an omnivore. However, his body is so adaptable that he can comfortably choose and change his food habits to fit into any one of the three above groups.

"That the carnivore may live, the herbivore must die." The flesh-eaters may kill and eat their own kind, but they usually select a species that lives on vegetation.

Among these, the defenseless cottontail rabbit most often serves as a link in life's important food chain.

THE Keating Column

The Eccentric is a real puller! Our "Good Buy" column of last week brought a great deal of traffic and we sold 2 of the 3 houses advertised. Carried away by our enthusiasm and with the co-operation of our good builder friend we are authorized to offer another "Best Buy". You can shop this area thoroughly and compare location, size, floor plan, and price. There isn't a better buy in Birmingham-Bloomfield.

Was $42,700. Cut to $38,500.

In the Bloomfield Hills school district, this home has 2503 square feet of living area. It has 4 bedrooms, 2 full baths plus powder room and grade lavatory. Paneled family room, Kohler plumbing fixtures, Richwall kitchen cabinets, built in barbecue and dozens of special features. Built to be the show house of the year, it's already carpeted. Can be purhased on favorable terms.

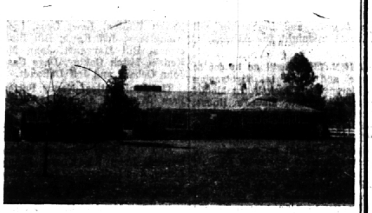
TRADE! TRADE! TRADE!



The Keating trade-in program is the painless way to buy a home. Whether you buy a new or a pre-owned home we will take your home in trade. Take the finely built luxury rambler pictured here for example. Taken in trade on their new home, we are prepared to sell this home at the below market price of $30,500. It has 4 bedrooms, 2½ baths, rocking chair, family room with barbecue. As a bonus, you get carpeting, draperies, automatic garage door openers, etc.

WE WILL TAKE YOUR HOME IN TRADE!

The recent rash of articles criticizing the home building industry for maintaining the "status quo" and being a backward business, are simply ridiculous. Today's new home is as different as that of 20 years ago, as the new 350 H.P., automatic transmission, air conditioned, automobile is from the model "A". Today's home is better framed, bigger, more completely equipped, better heated, and better cooled than its predecessors. And, it reflects much more house for the dollar. Millions of dollars are being spent on housing research today. We'd suggest that when you are shopping at Northland, you take a look at the "Alside" home. You'll see what we mean.

TRADE! TRADE! TRADE!

Here's another "trade-in" home that's an excellent value. Right in town, walking distance to Elementary and High schools, it's a top location. It has 3 bedrooms, 3 baths, family room, and full basement, that's finished for "rec" room, and an extra bedroom. Carpeting, draperies included at $28,500.

A GREAT NAME IN REAL ESTATE!
