

Floral Fever Arrives with the Winds of March

Flowers burst into fashion this spring.

Teen-age girls will wear flowers or flower colors from the tops of their hats to the tips of their shoes, predicts the March Seventeen magazine. Hats bloom with daisies, field flowers or floral lace; shoes come in flower shades which can be matched to a costume or treated as neutrals and worn with contrasting colors. Petite flower prints grow on crisply-tailored, feminine shirt-blouses.

Dresses and ensembles in skimpy shapes focus on gentle, flowery shades of pink, yellow and blue. The look is easy and uncluttered, highlighted by pullovers, drawstrings and the Empire line. Silks, crepes and textured or tweedy fabrics add to the liquid look; polka dots and refined florals abound.

PALE PINK, a color inspired by the Seventeen rose, blooms in shift dresses that glide gently past the figure. Many are sleeveless, with simple high necks.
