New Council Given Financial Statement

By NITA HARD
 Special Writer

WOOD CREEK FARMS — A quarterly financial statement by village treasurer Thomas Jennings Tuesday night gave new council members Mrs. Robert Swift, Ben De Cooke and Philo Wright a view of Wood Creek Farms' fiscal complexion.

The healthy state of this uncomplicated village prompted veteran Councilman Roy Nelson to quip, "We ought to declare a dividend!"

Street Commissioner Jack Richards injected a note of restraint by reminding the council any excess road funds were earmarked for spring road repair and ditching, starting with a heavy grading of village streets as soon as all the frost is gone.

VILLAGE President Norman Krierer presented a proposed fiscal general operating budget for 1963-64. A public hearing will be held 8 p.m. May 2, preceding the next regular meeting.

With a cash balance of $4,778 added to anticipated state refunds on sales and intangibles taxes of $5,200 and about $75 from miscellaneous incomes, the village figures it can manage nicely on $10,053.

Allowing about $5,176 for surplus contingencies, the proposed budget allocates $427 for salaries; $2,500 for legal fees to defend zoning; $300 printing and office expenses; $112 rent for meeting space at the St. Vincent-Sarah Fisher home; $64 for Michigan Municipal League dues; $148 for the treasurer's bond; $125 insurance; $1,000 for rubbish pick-up and $200 for other small expenses.

PHILO WRIGHT was appointed to complete the one year of the unexpired term of the late Carl Ambrose. Wright lives at 2846 Westbrook and has been a resident for about four years.
 Former councilman Herman Dobson was appointed the new building inspector.

WOOD CREEK Farms will make a preliminary study of future water needs. Councilman DeCooke was assigned to contact Farmington Township and Oakland County officials to learn about costs, engineering plans and sources of supply of water service.

An increase of accidents at 13 Mile and Northwestern led the council to a decision to investigate plans for prevention with state police and the county board of road commissions.

Learn

Teaching about money is one of several experiments "combining play and learning," according to Mrs. Annemarie Roeper, director of nursery and kindergarten. "What we try to do is to develop the child in all areas," said Mrs. Roeper. "We try to introduce critical thinking as well as having them express themselves both verbally and creatively."

AMONG THE things the children learn about is science (concepts of different phenomena—solids, liquids and gases) through their play experiments.

Professional instructors teach the nursery schoolers the fundamentals of dancing, singing and drama.

While learning the different relationships of money, the youngsters also have discovered the "profit motive."

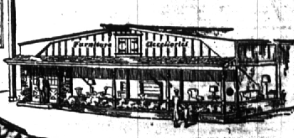

It works like this: The five-year-olds, with the help of Mrs. Lucy Donald, dietitian, make the sandwiches and sell them to the four-year-olds for one and two cents each. The fours, in turn, retail the food to the three-year-olds for three and four cents each.

Many of these new experiments with nursery school children will be discussed in detail at an institute May 4, entitled "Extending the World of the Child Under Six."

Delay Action On Change in Zoning Law

A proposed amendment to Birmingham's zoning ordinance governing requirements for parking spaces in a multiple-family dwellings was tabled by the city commission last week.

Commissioners agreed to postpone action on the amendment until after the planning department and plan board can study and make recommendations on all parking requirements in Birmingham.

Under the proposed amendment, one-and-three-quarter spaces for parking would be required for each unit in a multiple-family dwelling.

THE COMMISSION feels that the current one-to-one ratio in parking spaces is no longer adequate because of the growing number of two-car families in Birmingham. Included in the proposed amendment is a provision that would prevent any of the front open space in a multiple unit from being used for off-street parking.

The parking problem was brought to the attention of commissioners last summer when they were asked to study the parking conditions in the Pembroke Manor area.

CITY PLANNER William Brownfield told commissioners at the March 18 meeting that every new apartment area that develops compounds the parking problem. He said it also affects surrounding single-family dwellings.

A postal card survey conducted by Brownfield indicated the average number of vehicles owned by multiple-family residents was 1.41. This figure did not take into consideration any visitors multiple-family residents might have.
