Who's Going to Push Back the Walls?

Depending upon which recreation room turns out to be the largest, the Village Players of Birmingham will hold their cast party Saturday night at the home of the Frank N. Mosher or the Howard J. Thomsons.

As of press time, both Director Gertrude Thomson and Prompter Ginny Mosher were graciously volunteering their recreation rooms for the traditional party following the final performance of "Design for Murder."

If the pair decides that the Thomson recreation room on Ardmore Drive could accommodate more actors and backstage workers than the available Mosher space on N. Glenhurst, then the place will be set. Or vice versa.

Meanwhile, Assistant Director Mrs. William E. Keel says she is ready to order the food for the party, as soon as someone decides what the menu is to be.

THE CAST is only one of the groups parting in connection with Saturday night's performance at the Chestnut Street Playhouse.

Mrs. I. W. Evans has invited the John G. Carmichael, the Hugh Stevensons, the E. Nelson Kimballs, Mrs. Gertrude Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Gustafson, of Grand Rapids, for cocktails and dinner at her Lahser Road home before the show.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Matousek are entertaining twice at their home on Middlebury Lane, Bloomfield Township, in connection with the show, in which M. Matousek has a lead role. Among those on their guest list are the Marvin Blocks, the Gordon Beaumonts and the Arthur Ryders.

Others entertaining during the current Players' run are Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Reid, Jr., of Clifton Road, Birmingham, and the Walter F. Herdrichs of Edgewood Road, Bloomfield Township.

Final Class Ends Season

Air Trip to Orient Key to Adventure

Christmas at Bora-Bora; New Year's at Tahiti! This combination provided two unforgettable experiences for the DeVaults, Ruth and Chet, on their recent two-and-a-half month air tour of the Far East. Back in Birmingham now, their memory books and photo libraries are bulging.

A flying boat landed the DeVaults on the island paradise of Bora-Bora the afternoon of Christmas Eve. Alce, an American, and Maria, his beautiful Polynesian wife, own the Bora-Bora Hotel where Ruth and Chet stayed.

A circular, glass-enclosed hotel dining room, with expansive view of the blue-green sea, was the charming setting for their Christmas Eve dinner. A centerpiece in the room, covered with green branches, was colorfully decorated with lights and balloons to provide guests with a Christmas tree, and an unforgettable touch—a host of native children who paid a visit to pipingly render the familiar Christmas Carols, which they sang in native tongue, as taught by gifted Maria.

THE TWO VIVIDLY RECALL Tahiti and New Year's Eve. After a gay evening of dining and dancing, they retired to a thatched roof cottage with which they were accommodated by the Hotel Taoro.

Strange noises, which awakened them during the night, turned out to be the departing footfalls of a thief who had taken possession of Chet's cash, credit cards and travelers' checks! Following two exciting weeks at Tahiti, Ruth and Chet went on to Australia for two weeks in Sidney.

The DeVaults recommend the refreshing pick-up of a Singapore Sling, as made at the bar of the Hotel Raffles, Singapore. It was at this old and colorful hotel that Ruth and Chet stayed and think it exactly as described in the stories of Somerset Maugham.

In Singapore, according to Chet, there was a tremendous feeling of unrest and tension caused by pressures arising from formation of the new country of Malaysia.

—ON A TOUR OF Jim Thompson's Silk House in Bangkok, the travelers were delighted to meet Mrs. Harvey Klemmer of Detroit's well-known Dean Lucking family. Mrs. Klemmer is one of the American hostesses at this famous and beautiful home of the American Jim Thompson.

The Silk House is an old, old temple filled with exquisite Oriental antiques, beautiful Thai silks and priceless works of art. At Bangkok Ruth and Chet met Eleanor Sandford, personnel director of the Tokyo Embassy, who entertained them during their later visit to Tokyo.

In Hong Koffe the DeVaults viewed the grim and sullen Red Chinese Guards almost at arms reach across the Red Border. In this unusual city, as guests of Chinese friends, they were treated to a most unique and festive experience in an exotic setting.

They were taken to a ship, anchored in the harbor which had been converted into our version of a Casino. Their passage to the upper-class dining room was accompanied by the clinkety-clink of the tiles of Mah Jong players.

TOKYO, WITH EIGHT DAYS at the Imperial Hotel, was last but not least of the exciting "Eastern cities visited. Of special interest to Birmingham and Bloomfield Hills friends of former residents Mr. and Mrs. Norman Strouse, now of New York, was a get-together with Mrs. Strouse's son, Stan Holt.

Stan is with Readers Digest International and has been located in Tokyo for seventeen months. It was a glorious reunion with conversation about Stan's interesting life in Tokyo and about old friends of Birmingham.

A must, on the way home, was a visit to Ruth's son, James C. Kemp, and his family at Eugene, Ore. Dr. Kemp is a professor of physics at the University of Oregon.
