We're cooking up a gossip column full of tidbits. They aren't spicy, but we hope they're interesting:
Noel Stookey of Peter, Paul and Mary fame is expected back in the Birmingham area early in June on a vacation visit. And if you want the reason why he's vacationing here, cherchez la femme.
Sculptors Malcolm Moran and Don Buby are at work on an important commission. You'll be reading about and seeing it in a major Detroit institution.

PHOTOGRAPHER Robert Osborn got word last week that he is being considered for an award in the Popular Photography magazine contest. The editors wrote to ask him for the negative before they make their final decision. It's a picture of a little Osborn with big brown Osborn eyes. The photo was exhibited in Birmingham Camera's window a while back.

Dolores Viola, the gorgeous girl who plays one of the roles in Vanguard's current "The Hostage," is the sister-in-law of former Birmingham Eccentric township editor Bill Thomas.

KIDS IN the art classes at Bloomfield Art Association used up 200 pounds of clay in one recent week. Their instructor, the talented Betty Conn, helps the budget by mixing it herself. That way she can tell the young potters and sculptors to use all the clay they want. And, she adds, "They do!"

LAST TIME I saw the personable Dr. Edwin J. Westfall of Echo Lane, Bloomfield Township, he said he was hurrying home to his piano lesson.

Having once played half a dyzen woodwind and brass instruments in a college-days band, he had started on the piano for fun and relaxation. He was then up to "The Happy Butterfly" in the beginner's book.

That was just a few months ago. I saw the "personable physician again Saturday at a piano récital. Then I discovered that the teacher who comes to our house also teaches Dr. Westfall and two of his four children.

Before the recital, I rushed over to ask Dr. Westfall if he was going to play "The Happy Butterfly" for us.

BUT LIFE is full of little disappointments. The modest doctor had declined teacher Charles Sawyer's invitation to be in the recital. Anyway, he said, he was now up to "Sonatina," which was number 27 on the program, up where the pieces get difficult to play.

However, we did get to hear young Ed-Westfall play "Come Back to Sorrento," number 11 on the program. Then we heard Kathy Westfall, number 12, play "Ciribiribin."

The piano student at our house was number 22 on the program with "Voice of the heart." Susan Bourdin, of 1055 Pilgrim, Birmingham, played the difficult "Sonatina" with a skill that was impressive. Judging by Dr. Westfall's progress to such tough numbers in only a few months, we predict that soon he will be so good that he will make planists like Van Cliburn sick. And that might mean more work for him.

A 14-YEAR-OLD named Myra Friedlis played Grieg so well Saturday that I would have sat through numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, etc., etc., all over again just to hear more from Myra. She and Charles Sawyer played Suppe's "Poet and Peasant Overture" (number 31 on the programme) for a finale that was grand.
