Potpourri

by JULIE CANDLER
Special Writer

I could tell from her letters that Margaret Cousins was going to be fun. She was just that when she arrived the week before last to speak to this year's Ladies of the Press Breakfast.

Besides that, she can whip through a schedule that would almost make Gordon Cooper's 24 hours look like a tricycle ride.

She arrived for her Saturday in Detroit at 6:50 a.m. via a Wolverine passenger coach (for the benefit of you air-guys, that's a train).

By 9:15 Miss Cousins, who likes being called Maggie and claims it's even on her passport, was neatly decked out in a pretty green suit and wide-brimmed black straw hat. She was transported to a press conference at 9:50 a.m., then to the ballroom at Cobo Hall. There she attended a pre-breakfast kaffeeklatch with 300 newspaperwomen, poets, short story and article writers, hopeful novelists and others.

SHE SPOKE TEXAS-STYLE, in a warm and lazy drawl.

"Detroit women are much better dressed than New York women," she said when she met and admired the looks of former Birmingham Eccentric society editor Fran Mainer, now with the Detroit News.

After breakfast at 11 a.m., Maggie Cousins began her speech by saying, "I never thought of myself as a speaker. And when I get through, you probably won't think of me as one either."

By the time she had finished, she had a lot of women in the communications field convinced that we should communicate on behalf of women.

IT'S ABOUT TIME we began creating a new image for women, because most men believe that women are inferior mentally, physically and emotionally, she said. And she's right, this mental, physical and emotional inferior on the Potpourri pipeline will tell you.

The Cousin's estimation of herself as a speaker is as wrong as a 39 telephone book. I think about 300 Ladies of the Press agree that she's terrific.

After the breakfast, the Texas ball of fire paused for refreshment at the Top of the Flame and raved about the new Michigan Consolidated Gas building.

SHE TOLD Barbara Marx, assistant director of public information for Birmingham public schools, about enchanting and little-known places Barbara would enjoy in Italy in June.

To Potpourri, she explained how she manages to be alone with a typewriter. She rents an office, refuses to tell anyone what building or office it is, and has no telephone there.

She slips into the office every Monday and Tuesday for two full days' attack on the typewriter keys.

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday she's editing at Doubleday and Co.

HER PRESENT system works so well that in just a little over a year of Mondays and Tuesdays she has written six short stories, three articles, a mystery novel, part of a juvenile biography and the start of a novel due out in '64.

Writing at an office has an added advantage for her. "In an office, I can't snack between meals," says the calorie-conscious writer. "At home, I find myself poking in the refrigerator and I don't even know how I got there."

One of her recent short stories has been sold to Playboy magazine.

"It's offbeat, but it's clean," she says. Weekends she seldom writes. In summer, she weekends in what she calls her "eyrie" on the cliffs at Montauk, L. I.

"IN THE WINTER I go visit all the people who are indebted to me for summer weekend visits at the eyrie." After the Flame, the Cousins combustion chamber expresswayed to Greenfield Village for research on a biography of Thomas Edison she's writing, and from there, she zoomed back to her hotel, dressed and went out to dinner.

Now you know how she has the energy to write all those stories, articles, biographies and books.

IF YOU AREN'T completely exhausted after a day in the life of Maggie Cousins, and if you paint, sculpt, draw and generally create, then you may want to take your creations to the Birmingham Arts Festival Exhibition jury by 10 p.m. Saturday.

The distinguished director of the Detroit Institute of Arts is juror, and that should be a big incentive to submit the maximum of four entries for scrutiny by the knowledgeable eyes of Willis F. Woods.

You can get in touch with all the details at the Birmingham Art Center, Cranbrook Road just south of Lincoln.

Posters by Three Win AAA Notice

Three youthful artists from Birmingham have received special recognition for poster designs they submitted to the 1963 AAA National Safety Poster Contest, The Automobile Club of Michigan has announced.

Dennis Roberts, 16, of 791 Robinwood Circle, a student at Seaholm High School, won an honorable mention in the national contest for his poster design which illustrated a "Safe Driving Practice" rule.

The other Birmingham winners, Nils Eklund, 18, of 7850 Gold Spring Lane (Cass Technical High School), and Cheryl Sulewski, 17, of 3051 Marimoor (Shrine High School), received special commendations for posters illustrating the safety theme, "Ride One on a Bike."

THE YOUNGSTERS' posters were selected for awards by a board of educators and art experts who met in Washington, D.C., last month.

Has Musical Moment

The Moment Musicale, a junior group member of the Federated Music Clubs of Michigan, will present a concert at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Birmingham Community House.

The group is composed of boys and girls in seventh, eighth and ninth grades who are studying music both in the schools and through private teaching. The concert is open to the public. Counselors for the group are Mrs. A. E. Ebersole, Mrs. Robert Harter and Mrs. Paul Bartlett.

Gallery Closes; Auction Art

The L'Atelier Gallery in Detroit is closing; all work currently in the gallery will be sold at a public auction Tuesday and Wednesday beginning at 7 p.m., according to Inna Altshuler Weissman, L'Atelier director, who lives at 18236 Midway Ave., Southfield.

The gallery has handled work by local artists as well as work by artists such as Picasso, Rouault, Kollwitz, Egon Miro and Renoir. Auction inspection will be Saturday, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday from noon to 6 p.m. The auction is being handled by Norman Levy Associates of Detroit.

Former Resident Exhibits Prints

Jill Morton, formerly of Birmingham, a senior at DePaul University, has several prints exhibited in the university's senior art exhibition which opened May 15. The show, featuring work completed during the current year by senior art majors, will continue through June 9.

In addition to heading numerous campus decoration committees, Jill has taught children's Saturday art classes for a year and one-half. She served as a student-assistant in printmaking during her senior year.

Following her graduation next month, Jill will teach art at Mahwah Junior-Senior High School in New Jersey. She is a graduate of Birmingham High School. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Morton, 100 Elbrook, Alhambra, N. J.
