Classes End At Cranbrook; Students Rest

By JESS BREWER
Special Writer

School is out at Cranbrook! The last final exam ended this morning and nearly 400 students poured out of the school for summer vacation.

Only the fourth, fifth and of course, sixth forms remained for the commencement dances and commencement itself.

Those who plan to attend the glorious dance this evening are presently either sleeping or resting, recovering from that last exam. And there is an air of immeasurable relief about the school, for the pressure is at last off.

After their practice session at the baccalaureate service last Sunday, the upper three classes are ready for their solemn walk in and out of Christ Church on Saturday morning.

BUT FOR MOST, Saturday still seems a long way off. There is the big dance tonight, and the party afterwards, running into the small hours of the morning, and tomorrow night a repeat performance with the Kingswood dance and party. Between now and then, there is still another big event — the occasion of Awards Night tomorrow evening, when most of the important accomplishments of the year will be officially recognized, and many prizes and medals will be awarded.

It seems that everything important is coming in the next few days — but with luck Cranbrook students will not lose sight of the supreme occasion of commencement, when the class of '63 will approach Mr. Hoey in their caps and gowns to receive the small ribboned rolls which signify the years they have spent at Cranbrook. This is the moment that will always be remembered.
