can you guess the price of this carpet?

It's Bigelow's new Glenbark—with 100% Du Pont Continuous Filament Nylon Pile

Feast your eyes on Glenbark's beautiful decorator colors! Run your hands over the subtle cobblestone surface! This is a texture that never dies . . . springs back despite rugged traffic and crushing. Glenbark has hidden features, too. Because it's crafted of Du Pont continuous filament nylon, it resists annoying piling and shedding and it's wonderfully non-absorbent (soil stays on the surface . . . cleans off like a charm.) How much do you think this exciting, custom-lock carpet costs? Turn this ad upside down for a happy surprise!

ANSWERS: Despite all the quality departments in and out of Bigelow's carpet stores, you'll find the carpeting you want to step on and see Glenbark today!

MRS. DEMPSEY

of rose points over heavy white satin. The snug little bodice had a scalloped V neckline, and the short sleeves ended halfway above the elbow. The slender skirt extended into a solid point de venise train.

The bride wore a scalloped mantilla of Chantilly lace and carried gamellas and trailing ivy. Her only piece of jewelry was a necklace of tiny seed pearls encircling a heart of pearls. This had also been worn by her mother and grandmother when they were married.

MRS. JOHN Blakey of Royal Oak was matron of honor, and bridesmaids included Mary Hyman, sister of the bride; Molly Eastis of Birmingham; Kay Ehrenberger of Royal Oak.

They all wore sea blue peau jolie dresses styled with fitted bodices and controlled bell-shaped skirts. Their picture hats were trimmed with sea blue velvet ribbon bows and streamers, and they carried white fans topped by white daisies.

Martin J. Dempsey, Jr. was his brother's best man and ushers were Brian Hyman, brother of the bride; Patrick Wagner of Chicago, Ill., and Joseph Quinn of Lackawanna, N. Y.

Following a wedding breakfast at Kingsley Inn, the couple left for three days in New York before sailing.
