Potpourri

by JULIE CANDLER
Special Writer

Stick with Potpourri this week, and you'll go places. We're moving all over the world via our tired 1920 model Royal typewriter.

We take you now to a country place in Connecticut, to visit composer Charles Turner, a former Birmingham resident. But we won't stay long, because Turner is busy. He has commissions for three special compositions to be completed by early fall. That's why he's isolating himself in a quiet New England farmhouse for the rest of the summer.

"Sounds delightful to me," said Potpourri when Charles' brother, Kenneth E. Turner, Jr., told us about it. "Sounds like work to me," said realistic brother Turner, of Will-O-Way Apprentice Theatre fame. Back in the days when Charles Turner lived on Oakland Avenue, he was a child prodigy who played violin concerts before local audiences.

Since then, he has composed the music for a ballet performed by the New York City Ballet. He has orchestrated a Menotti opera and written a number of compositions, one of which was played here by the Detroit Symphony.

Now a New York City resident, the composer was back last week to visit his parents, the senior Turners of 401 N. Eton, Birmingham.

OUR NEXT stop on this international cultural tour will be Salzburg, Austria. And you couldn't ask for a nicer company than Potpourri will introduce you to there. It's the lovely Ball of talent and beauty named Penelope, daughter of the Lawrence M. Balls of 1040 Chesterfield, Birmingham.

Penny left Wednesday to study piano in Europe for a year, following up the bachelor of music degree she obtained this spring from Eastman School of Music.

Her teacher in Salzburg will be Dr. Kurt Neumuller (two little dots belong over the second U in that name, but my tired typewriter can only produce them sideways, like this :).

IF YOU'RE still with us, we take you now to Chicago, where dwells former Beverly Hills Councilman Leo J. Linsenmeyer. He's no artist or musician. He's a sales manager. But he digs the cultural beat in the Windy City.

We asked Leo about it recently when we ran into him at the Detroit Press Club. Leo obliged by sending Potpourri copies of two Chicago newspapers' feeble attempts to equal the cultural coverage provided by Potpourri and the Arts of Living section of The Birmingham Eccentric.

One of the papers, the Chicago Daily News, publishes a special Sunday section devoted to book reviews, art, theatre, music, movies and night life. The section is called "Panorama," and it's great. Makes you think that Leo Linsenmeyer and his pretty wife picked a good town to be transferred to last year.

The other newspaper, the Chicago Tribune, puts the cultural beat in a Sunday section underneath the covers with social news and fashions. Potpourri maintains social news and feminine fashions scare some of the men away from the book reviews and news of the arts.

Joe Blow tosses aside that Chicago Tribune Sunday section, saying, "That stuff is for dames."

The Potpourri theory is that we could interest a lot of men in opera, drama and art if more newspapers took such news off the women's pages.

Maybe papers can't arrange a special Arts of Living section like The Birmingham Eccentric prints. But the least they can do is report the cultural news in the sports section. Put it next to the baseball scores, and men will read it.

Dr. Ross to Attend Speech Convention

Dr. Raymond S. Ross, 1714 Norfolk Drive, Birmingham, associate professor of speech at Wayne State University, will participate in two sessions at one of the regional representatives to the legislative assembly of the speech association, to be held Aug. 18-21 in Denver, Colo. Dr. Ross was recently the recipient of a distinguished alumna award. Ross will speak on "Discussion and Marquette University."

Local Theater Students Give One-act Plays

The Cranbrook Summer Theatre School presented a series of one-act plays on Monday night in Cranbrook's open-air Greek Theatre. The plays were chosen from the previous Friday morning's workshops.

The youngest members of the school did two plays: "The Fairy and the Doll" and "The Stubborn Elf." Juniors in these plays were Diana Davidson, Jill Whiston, Pam Ankeny, Cynthia Dunitz, Nancy Aiken, Donna Eilman, Ted Heavens, Jonathan Miller, and Jim Zimmerman. The intermediate division picked a cutting from "Junior Miss" and a melodrama "Not Fit for Man nor Beast." Appearing were Susan Witt, Betsy Arree, Lorie Cooper-Smith, Prudy Vogt, Sue Merson, Mike Johnson, Larry Malone, and Dan Robinson.

THE SENIOR division, consisting of high school age students, presented six plays. Appearing in "The End of a Perfect Day" were Bowen, Debby Gordon and Virginia James Miller, Donna Bell, Pamela Wanger.

Those in a comedy called "Breakfast" were Brad Bloetcheer, Jan Wallace, Nancy Shrieber, Patty Harley, Kate Klarr, and Debbie Doback. A play called "Four o'clock" had Charles Lambert, Barry Baker, Mary Jane Hilder, Catherine Hilton and Cynthia Cahn. Fred Purdy, Ann Douglas, and Erin McKenna appeared in "The Necklace."

Students in "Road to Rome" were John Bullington, Glenn Larson, Bill Tygerson, Linda Frank and Judy Gordon. Portraying the characters in "Good Medicine" were Dan Janss, Judy Lane and Marie Exner.

MONDAY WILL BE the last evening of one-act plays before work begins on four final three-act plays. The first will be a full production of "Sleeping Beauty" which will be held on July 24 and 25 at 8 p.m. in the Greek Theatre on Lone Pine Road. For ticket information contact Mrs. Wonnberger at Cranbrook.

OU Students Stage Plays For Benefit

Oakland University's student drama group, the Meadow Brook Theatre Guild, will present four one-act plays the evenings of July 18, 19, and 20 to raise funds to equip its new theater area.

The four plays are "Endgame," by Samuel Beckett, "Lord Byron's Love Letter," and "Lady of Larkspur Lotion," both by Tennessee

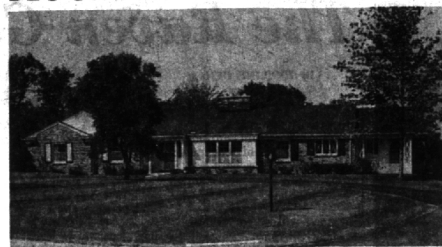

Williams, and "Purgatory," by William Butler Yeats. Members of the production staff include Anthony Hammer of 1299 Yorkshire Road, Birmingham; Jim Wolfe of 3290 Devon Brook, Bloomfield Hills; and Tom Malle of 905 Dedham Court, Bloomfield Hills.

THE THEATRE Guild recently was given the lower level of the Intramural Building for use as a theater, and the one-act plays will be its first money-raising effort seeking to turn it into a theater seating 400 persons. Curtain time is 8 p.m. Tickets are available at the door. The Birmingham Eccentric Classified pages offer you a fine opportunity to sell your unwanted household goods.
