Great-grandchildren View James Couzens' Papers

Sixty years ago a bookkeeper named James Couzens helped found Ford Motor Co. He invested $2,500 of his own funds and helped his employer, local dealer Alex Malcomson, round up other investors who became stockholders in the company being formed by Henry Ford.

The bookkeeper became the first secretary of the new firm that was destined to become a giant industrial complex and to bring riches to most of the original stockholders. Later he won fame as a U. S. senator. Metropolitan Detroit commemorates the birth of Henry Ford. The displays proved of special interest to the family of James Couzens II, of 2815 Amberly, Birmingham. Touring the Ford Rouge facilities, they made it a point to visit the lobby where original documents of the company's founding were displayed.

who backed Henry Ford in early struggles within the company over what type of car to build. When others, including Alex Malcomson, broke with Ford because they favored a large, expensive car, Couzens bought stock offered for sale by Vernon Fry (Malcomson's cousin), Charles J. Woodall, Albert Stralow and C. H. Bennett.

When Ford purchased minority stock holdings in 1919, the largest share of $105,000,000 went to James Couzens, who received $29,308,857.50 for his stock.

Couzens gave substantially of his wealth to charitable organizations, especially to institutions designed to promote health and happiness of children. Through 1929 his benefactions totaled over $20,000,000.

FIVE OF the eight Couzens children accompanied their mother, Mrs. Janet Couzens. Among them was James Couzens III, a freshman at Brother Rice High School, third to bear the name of the company cofounder. He and his brothers and sisters are great-grandchildren of the U. S. senator. Their father, James Couzens II, is the son of the late Frank Couzens, mayor of Detroit and son of the original James Couzens. James Couzens II is owner of the Village Sport and Hobby Shop in Birmingham.

Asthma Sufferers Can Find Relief At Boyne City

The onset of summer brings to thousands of Michigan residents a problem known to non-sufferers as the "mucin" season.

Individuals bothered by hay fever or asthma during the hot, humid weather when the pollen count jumps sky high do not take this season as lightly, however.

BOYNE CITY, a popular spot for winter tourists, issues an open invitation to allergy sufferers to spend their summer there. The community near Lake Charlevoix boasts the purest air in the Midwest. In several years of testing, Boyne City never recorded a day the pollen count went over the distress point.

Package Security

To tie a package more securely, dampen the cord before wrapping it around the package. The cord will shrink and tighten as it dries.
