Quarterbacking the Half

No football game would be complete without the halftime show the band puts on, and it's no small chore to dream up the theme, the songs and the formations (let alone the rehearsal and drill) that go into one. Seen outlining on a chart — which has football field markings—a big 'B' for Birmingham are Arnold Berndt, music coordinator for Birmingham Schools, and Eugene Hanson, instrumental instructor.

THE STORM

The Storm

I see the storm clouds in the west—
I hear the falling rain—
I see the lightning in the sky
Flash through the window pane.
The trees are bent—their hanging boughs

Are swinging to and fro—
It seems that they must break apart
They're whipped and twisted so!
The tortured winds in fury blow,
The thunder's roar is loud;
The sun is hidden far away
Behind an angry cloud.
And only man will brave the storm
In spite of his alarm,
For all of God's small creatures hide
Where they are safe from harm!

Little Choir Girl

This young lady joins the chorus singing out loud and clear for a choir boy collared skimmer. Its look is all innocence, with pure white collar and extended cuffs and a red rose at the throat. Slot seam detailing gives way to very low, short box pleats at the dress bottom. It's cotton, in black olive only.

ALL

We know these are not ordinary children's shoes because parents who start with Kali-sten-iks for their babies are insisting on this fine brand as their children grow up.
