There Shall Be Dancing

Mothers and dads of youngsters who are of dancing school age can heave a sigh of relief at this point, for the situation is about to be handled by three dedicated people who are joining forces to make Junior's social life not only fun, but directed toward observance of the social graces.

With the recently consummated partnership of Florence Schofield Young and Lillian and Ted Forrest, Birmingham and Grosse Pointe have cemented a pattern for young fry adhered to through the generations—a tried and true pattern, if one is interested in helping his child learn physical poise, the social amenities and proper etiquette.

Qualifications They Have!

Most of Birmingham and Bloomfield know Florence Young, whose first teaching assignment in this part of the country (she hails from Kentucky) was at Miss Newmans' School for girls in Detroit. Many a memory book—dating back to the '30s—is crammed with pictures taken at her fabulous May Parties held, first, at the old Book-Cadillac then, later on, in the Crystal Ballroom at the Masonic Temple.

THE TED FORRESTS AND MISS YOUNG

When, along with the rest of the North End (or so it seemed) Miss Young moved out B'ham way, her classes were held at Detroit Country Day, Vaughan School and Oakland Hills Country Club. Currently, besides teaching, she also assists Mrs. Ernst Kern with Cotillion (local high school dance club) and Mrs. Arthur Naylor and Mrs. Walter Cronin with Assembly, a series of parties at the Community House for the junior high group.

In the meantime, Lillian and Ted Forrest, serving their apprenticeship under Paul Strasburg whose family has taught dancing to Detroit for over 100 years, have been on their own for the past 15 years, teaching at the Little Club, Detroit Country Club, Grosse Pointe Hunt Club and, as of recently, at Bloomfield Open Hunt.

Mrs. Henry Ford was among their local patrons and, on a national scale, Franklin Roosevelt's grandchildren were pupils and so were the DuPont youngsters.

Vital Statistics

Classes in Birmingham will start Oct. 4 at Oakland Hills and Oct. 15 at Vaughan School. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Jones, the Joseph Flahertys and Mr. and Mrs. William Thomas are on the patron's list, along with Mr. and Mrs. Carter Chamberlain, the Edgar A. Guests, Dr. and Mrs. Richard Pearce, Mr. and Mrs. Bethel B. Kelley, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Grix, the Allen D. Harts, Dr. and Mrs. John L. Wiant, Mr. and Mrs. William Dorman, the Frank Egans, the William Ostermanns, Mrs. James B. Harcke, Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Andree, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cronin, the Arthur Naylors and Mrs. Harry F. Menard.
