Local Volunteer En Route Today For Colombia

Anne Patricia Hummel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hummel of 2435 Devon Lane, Birmingham, has begun a two-year assignment as a Peace Corps volunteer in Colombia.

She is one of a group of 50 Volunteers now on home leave prior to departure for Colombia today to work on an educational television project.

The government of Colombia has instituted educational television program to improve Colombian education and accelerate the country's economic and intellectual development. The Peace Corps has been invited to participate in this project along with the Agency for International Development.

PEACE CORPS volunteers are already at work in Colombia helping to establish a system of educational television with the potentiality of eventually reaching 85 per cent of the population.

This new group of volunteers will act as liaisons between the studios and the classrooms. They will work closely with Colombian teachers, helping them to use effectively the broadcast programs and observing student reaction. They will advise television producers how to adapt programs to the classroom experience.
