Village Skating Rink Sinks Into Oblivion

Neva Rahn

Before, when people did the "double-dip" at the movies, the chances of paying a ten-cent admission were slim. Now, when you show up flat-footed at the Village Rink on a chilly Saturday evening, you're in some trouble. The door is locked, the sign says "Closed," and you scan the street for a forgotten change. Unfortunately, the rink is closed because it's almost season time, and there was too much snow. The Village had hoped to open the week of December 2, but the weather put the kibosh on it. In the meantime, there will be a skating party for the two weeks' employees on Saturday night. The rink is scheduled to open the week after the 14th, with a "Village Night" featuring a midnight skating session.
