Jan. 15, 1936

With hardly any students in attendance, there was a meeting of the Board of Education in the Michigan Public Schools Administration. It was said that the school district was making arrangements to meet the financial problems of the year. It was reported that the school board was taking steps to improve the educational facilities of the district.

... Custer's 115 armor plates were made during the war, as weighed and issued, only 11 tons for ironwork. The ironworks were completed for the military in 1944.

Charles F. W. Kinsman, early director of the Michigan Education Board, has announced his retirement to return to his home in Detroit.
