Lincoln's Classic Car of 1964 Is Town Brougham

The Lincoln Continental Town Brougham is a contemporary version of the classic town car of a generation ago.

Based on a standard 1964 Lincoln Continental, the Town Brougham was created by the Ford Motor Co.'s styling office on a 111-inch wheelbase—five inches longer than the wheelbase of the production model. Its overall length is 251.5 inches, almost up five inches.

The Town Brougham's compartment and window between front and rear compartments give the Town Brougham the flavor of the custom-built 'town cars' of the 1900's and 1950's.

The interior features liberally applied aluminum panels, high-quality carpet, and brookstone up-lighting lights mounted in the sides of the front fenders and courtesy lights on the posts between front and rear compartments. It is painted a unique Plaza Blue Pearl. The roof is covered with black leather, gray vinyl and the back window is smaller than on the standard model.

The front wall of the passenger compartment holds built-in magazine racks, a mobile telephone set, a rear compartment radio and a rear compartment speaker. The rear compartment speaker is mounted in the rear compartment quarter panel, and is in the radio speaker grille in the front compartment.
