

Prosperous West Berlin's prime tourist attraction is the Wall, and it profits considerably from people who come to see the barrier built by Communist East Berlin which is drab and depressed.

Franklin Exchange Student Tells of Stay in Germany

By MARION CASKEY
Special Writer

As an AFS summer exchange student in Germany, Mary Gidley of scenic Drive in Franklin became so much a part of her second home that she caught herself talking German in her sleep.

The end of June Mary sailed to Rotterdam with 550 other AFS students, less than a month after finding out that she had been selected. She was with 93 others bound for Germany.

In Stuttgart Mary was met by her new family, the Reibsteins of Oberndorf, Nocker in the Black Forest area. She had a 19-year-old "sister," Gabby, and a brother Wolf, 15.

FOR THE FIRST 2 1/2 weeks she attended a boarding school with her sister and did her best to absorb the subjects in her new "home language."

Usually, Mary had studied German for two years at Groves and gradually became quite accustomed to using it. She made a few language mistakes, such as calling her sister a pig—a faux pas of monumental proportions in Germany.

The dialect Swabish is used in southwest Germany and is quite difficult to understand, but everyone knows high German and spoke that in courtesy to Mary in her presence.

In Oberndorf, Mary and Gabby went to the local swimming pool, hiked in the Black Forest, and acted pretty much like teen-agers in America. Mary says they are basically the same although the boys wear very pointed shoes and wear their hair much longer.

The women part their hair much more than Americans but wear no make-up and, Mary observed, have lovely complexions.

YOUNGSTERS cannot get drivers' licenses until they are 18, but some driving is so horrible in Germany, Mary thinks perhaps the later age is to spare them a couple more years of safety.

Because of the older driving privileges, they don't start dating until they are older than Americans and seem to marry a little later, too.

Everyone rides bicycles and it's rather delectable to have a little old lady whizz by you peddling up a hill, but this frequently happens.

Soon after Mary arrived in Oberndorf, the town had a Heimat Fest, or homecoming celebration. They gather in the village square for beer and singing and start dancing around midnight. Festivities go on until 3 or 4 in the morning.

THE REIBSTEINS were professional people who had escaped from East Berlin in 1957 and were gradually building a new life. They just purchased a refrigerator last spring and hoped for a TV in time to watch the Olympics.

They live in a picturesque white plastered house with a red roof. They rent from landlords who live on the upper floor.

The last two weeks of August Mary spent motoring with the Reibsteins to Strasbourg, France, Switzerland, and the Austrian Alps near Innsbruck.

THEN she went north to Bremen where she stayed four days with another family and met the other 93 exchange students.

They had a departure party, made a TV broadcast commemorating 50 years of AFS, and with the 650 others embarked for home.

Bloomfield Hills School District #2 comprises approximately 28 square miles of territory. A fleet of 40 buses is used to transport students to attractive, moderate cost schools. Each school has a hot lunch program. Classes average 25 pupils with a range of 18 to 32 pupils.
The District's valuation is $117,388,412. The millage tax rate for schools is 24.51. School construction has been maintained through public support, thus half day classes and oversize classes have been avoided. With about 60% of the land being used for homes, there is every indication of continued rapid growth.
A recent bond issue of $7,670,000.00 makes possible additions to five elementary schools, additions to the two junior high schools, two new elementary schools, a new junior high school, a new senior high school with swimming pool, an administration building, and a bus facility. This comprises a three to five year building program which should be our last big construction since additions will likely satisfy future building needs beyond the present five year planning period.
EUGENE L. JOHNSON, Superintendent
