Hathaway and Kodol, revive

The cult of the crisp, white shirt

HATHAWAY AND KODEL have just whipped up a crisp little classic that stays white, no matter what.

The clue to its whiteness is in the fabric—an ingenious new blend of 65 percent Kodol* and 35 percent cotton. This astonishing stuff feels deliciously silky. Drip-dries. And thanks to a secret process known to only seven living men, keeps its sparkle—even at the laundry.

As for Lady Hathaway's tailoring, just look at that outrageously flattering bow. It makes a face look soft—and triumphantly feminine.
