

Three Young Runaways Write for Repentance

By NITA HARD

FRANKLIN—Three little girls took it on the lam last week after being reprimanded by their families for minor infractions of behavior. Missing from home for several hours, their disappearance brought on a major alert and search by Franklin Volunteer police and state police.

The runaways were found at 1 a.m. in a field near their homes, safe and sound and thoroughly scared by the commotion of search parties.

REPENTANT, they addressed letters to the village police this week.

"Dear cops, (police-men) I'm sorry for the trouble I caused last night. I know now that I shouldn't have run away. Thanks for caring about me. I would like to thank all of the other police. I won't ever run away again. I'm enclosing five dollars for your service. Yours truly, Runaways No. 1, 2, 3."

Runaway No. 2 wrote:

"Dear policeman, We are very sorry for all the trouble we caused. And I enclose $5 for all the trouble. We'd like to thank all the volunteer policemen. We didn't think running away would get everybody so riled up. We know it is wrong and we won't do it again."

ski of Ferndale, in debate before the election.

"I'm campaigning on my own record and have to answer only to the thousands of voters," he said. "I have my work cut out just meeting people."

Broomfield said his schedule seems to include more appearances before nonpartisan groups than in previous years.

On the national level, Broomfield said he was going to vote for the national ticket.

"But I want it understood that I'm running on my own particular record and don't intend to change my stand on issues to coincide with the national ticket," he said.

"I reserve the right to my own judgment as to what is in the best interests of the country," he declared.

"The record will show that I have differed with Mr. Goldwater more than once," he said.

Broomfield is the ranking Republican member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, senior Republican on Asia and National Security subcommittees and a member of the Africa subcommittee.

Talking about the November election, he says he is "confident but not complacent."

"I'm proud of my record and am encouraged that things seem to be going well," he said.

Broomfield left his family in Washington but expects to have his wife fly back to the county several times between now and the election.

During his years in government service Broomfield has found "helping people" his most rewarding experience.

Delay Opening Of New Kingsley

Final construction details have caused the delay of the grand opening of the New Kingsley Inn Hotel in Bloomfield Hills. F. N. Takis, owner-host of the 102-room establishment at Woodward and Long Lake, has rescheduled the official opening for Thursday, Oct. 29.

The new establishment, second largest commercial venture in Bloomfield Hills, will have facilities to feed over 1,000 persons three meals a day and to sleep 300.

Marriage Counseling Program Now Provided

A program providing training and professional consultation in marriage counseling, made possible by a three year grant from the McGregor Fund and the Mott Foundation, has been announced by the Religious Assistance and Protective Services, Inc., of Oakland County.

Dr. Arthur Riewald of Birmingham has been named director of the Marriage and Family Consultation Service. Judge Arthur E. Moore of Oakland County Circuit Court has given active leadership in making this program possible.

Dr. Riewald is a psychologist, having earned his Ph.D. degree from Michigan State University. In addition, he has received postdoctoral training in psychotherapy and marriage counseling.

Serving as consultant to the program is Dr. Aaron Rudelege, a consulting psychologist and head of the Marriage Counseling and Psychotherapy Program at Merrill-Palmer Institute.

DR. ARTHUR RIEWALD

The Oakland County Circuit Bench is concerned with the extent of the divorce problem. All county circuit and probate judges are incorporators of the program. The circuit judges' committee, Judge Philip Pratt, Judge James S. Thornburn and Judge Henry S. Kiser, are collaborating and are hopeful that the new program will be beneficial to the community.

CLEERGYMEN AND other professional persons desiring more information about the Marriage and Family Consultation Service may contact Dr. Riewald at 400 Pontiac State Bank Building, Pontiac.

The clergy of all 500 churches of the county, through the Religious Assistance Office, are offering cooperative assistance. The board of directors and executive committee include, among others, the following area clergy:

The Rev. James M. McDonald, Holy Name Catholic Church, Birmingham; and the Rev. Ralph W. Jankis, pastor, Troy Methodist Church.

THIS EXPERIMENTAL project is designed to increase the resources for trained marriage counseling within the community, particularly at the preventive level. The initial emphasis of the program will be upon the supplemental professional training of ministers, priests and rabbis.

Recognizing the activity of the clergy in marital counseling, training seminars for the clergy in marriage and premarital counseling will be offered throughout the county. In addition, where requested by clergy, direct consultation will be provided. The director will aid in making appropriate referrals of more complicated cases as indicated.

A SERIES OF three public lectures for clergymen of the county will begin the program. The first of these will be held on Oct. 28 at 10:30 a.m. in the county courthouse auditorium in Pontiac. Dr. Rudelege will speak in "The Clergy as Marital Health Resources."

The emphasis in this project will be upon the development of a program that will make a positive contribution to family stability. Because the long range needs of the community for improving marital adjustment and family living can best be achieved with a program of prevention, a major part of the work will involve assistance to the clergy in their counseling with couples looking forward to marriage.

A SERIES OF seminars for couples planning a future marriage will be conducted. Preparation for marriage will also be emphasized through a variety of community, church and school programs.

This service is intended to work in conjunction with other community agencies and professional persons providing assistance to marriages and families in need. Although unrelated to the courts, there will be a close working relationship with the recently insti-
