Newberg

—said, therefore, could not be responsible for a corporation sales drop in 1961, as the Post had charged.

SAID NEWBERG, "My discharge was accomplished by means of a management conspiracy that is probably without parallel in all industrial history." He said the discharge "... had as its main goal to use me as a sacrificial lamb to attempt to protect others from suffering the consequences of their own corporate-management sins. And, dominant, among the 'others' was one Lester Lam Colbert, then chairman of the board of Chrysler Corp...."

Following his "discharge" from Chrysler, Newberg related, he was asked to sign over to the corporation $455,000 in supplier firm profits or be subject to a "recovery" suit by Chrysler and to prosecution by the Securities Exchange Commission.

HE REPORTED "... the SEC threat was spelled out to 10 years in prison and $50,000 in fines."

"Almost simultaneously, a 'plan' was placed alongside the SEC threat," an offer as chief executive officer of Studebaker-Packard Corp.

However, Chrysler was demanding the $455,000 immediately; the new job offer would not be available until the Studebaker-Packard board chairman returned from Europe, Newberg said.

He signed the $455,000 agreement. "Back home, it finally began to dawn on me that I had been taken."

According to Newberg, he discovered the SEC never had planned prosecution in connection with any of his activities. Also, he said, Studebaker-Packard later issued a press release stating that he had never been considered for employment and that none of their representatives had contacted him.

"THE $155,000 had become a highly publicized symbol of guilt, and it had been so contrived by a ruthless management conspiracy," He filed suit to recover the money returned to Chrysler.

In the letter to the Post, addressed attention of Matthew J. Culligan at Curtis Publishing Co., Newberg said he is being represented by the Detroit-based law firm of Hand, Kiefer, Allen & Ryan.

A suit of $5.2 million personal damage against Colbert, who is now board chairman of Chrysler of Canada, also has been filed by Newberg.

THE POST LETTER reported Newberg's personal emotions during the period of the "Newberg incident," as he said the episode was lacerating. At one point, he stated:

"In the immediate wake of my discharge, I felt as though I must be going through a constant state of sleep-walking—not just regular sleep-walking, but sleep-walking on stilts."

Water Authority Suggests Booster Pump In City

A suggestion by the Southeastern Oakland County Water Authority to install a booster pump on the site of the Southfield Well at Southfield and 14 Mile roads was referred to the administration by Birmingham city commissioners Monday night.

In a letter to the commission, Donald C. Egbert, authority engineering manager, said the purpose of such a pump would be to increase water pressure.

THIS, HE said, would ease the problem of supplying water to the northern portion of the city.

That area of Birmingham is, Egbert said, in excess of 780 feet above sea level and forces the authority to use "expedients which we would not consider practical as a long-range plan" to maintain pressure.

The cost of such a pump would be paid for by the authority and installed at no expense to the City.

Lost Decibels Seek Funds

The Lost Decibels of Oakland County will conduct a fund-raising campaign in downtown Birmingham on Saturday, Nov. 21.

The group, which is made up of the parents of deaf children, was granted permission to conduct the drive by city commissioners Monday night.

Richard Mitchell, head of the group, said the money is used to conduct a year-round educational program for deaf youngsters that the children would regress in their school work during the summer months.

He said an arrangement had been worked out with the Oakland County Schools to provide classroom space and the Lost Decibels provide the teachers.

He added that the group is attempting to become a part of the United Foundation.
