Although these people loudly proclaim their patriotism, in actuality they are afraid to trust the democratic process. They do not have the patience required to make democracy work.

They fear all change but particularly social change. They label as "socialistic" or "communist" anything that does not fall within their narrow angle of vision or acceptance.

They have lost all sense of reason and perspective. They are incapable of evaluating facts or seeing a problem in its overall context.

They see everything in terms of absolutes. If it isn't black it has to be white. There is no in-between.

Senator Goldwater's smashing defeat has not ended the threat from the extreme right. Their activities will require increased vigilance.
