THE GOLDEN YEARS

It is about time the country got over the notion that retirement is just an old man's game. So wide have become the ramifications of the Serutan and Shufeldt Society that most people from age 25 on are now caught up in the retirement process. A business frequently can hire two college graduates for the salary of one. It is paying one 55-year-old employee who is about to be retired. Better still, it can hire one sharp college graduate one year before the old man retires, teach him to do the old man's job, and in a couple of years be making a profit on the exchange.

YOUNG PEOPLE who don't realize all this—and most of them don't—haven't been taught all they should know. Of they haven't been taught, they should be.

The second encounter with the retirement process (usually come to people in their jearly thirties. They are married now, are busy much in love, have babies, bills, mortgages, problems, frustrations with their careers), and more bills.

At this age they dream of the privacy and the security of retirement, in what is probably the purest and most wonderful dream of retirement people ever have.

DONT SCOFF at this. I get about 2,500 letters a month from newspaper readers. I know. This third encounter with retirement comes when people reach their forties. At this point when they're getting on with success, the children are growing up, and Papa and Mama are striving mightily to join everything and be everything and buy everything—at this point the parents of the husband and wife come up for retirement. If they are like most parents now retiring, Papa and Mama must provide an emotional crutch for their—a show of love, attention, and concern—while their own emotional crutch is threatening to crack. They also, in many cases, must provide money.

THE FOURTH encounter with retirement—long before age 45 and the gold watch—comes in the early fifties. And this is a tough one.

People in their fifties begin hearing signals beeping all around them, telling them it is growing late, retirement is coming, and they'd better start storing some puts.

Retirement is just an old man's game? Some game!
