Rich, indeed, and blessed is the youth who approaches maturity with the deep conviction that honest effort, when applied to a job, in the end "pays off"—and in the days, months, even years, that bring this youth to middle-age security, he had some fun while working at it. The job may have been one in which the head was used more than the hands . . . or the other way around . . . but it brought reward from "honest effort." (GRA)
