program that will suit the individual.

"I don't think the Ivy League colleges with 1,000 freshmen can do a better job than MSU with 7,000. They are getting the kind of education that will best fit them for the kind of lives that they want to lead."

One way that MSU is solving this problem is the self-contained residence halls, designed under the English pattern. Here, a student lives, attends classes and is counseled all under one roof, thus preserving the "individual spirit."

HANNAH stressed the four basic needs which must be met by colleges within the next few years:

- More teachers. By 1965, an increase of 43,000 students also means that 24 per cent more teachers are needed. Emphasis needs also to be placed on the training of college teachers.

- More libraries and equipment.

"We need more students to do the work themselves. He cited the "knowledge explosion" where every sizable school must have computer assistance and other expensive technical aids.

- More buildings. Hannah asked the legislators at this meeting for $21,000,000 for new space, replacements and renovations. He cited MSU's own building expansions that have gone north beyond the Red Cedar River.

He said that several of their newer developments were completely financially self-sustaining because of foundation monies or other grants, such as the MSU International Center, Cyclotron building and plant radiation research laboratory.

Another aim is to raise MSU's rank from eighth to fifth among Big Ten schools for teaching salaries. Leading the group is Northwestern University, which pays its professors $16,230, while MSU grants $13,640. MSU, however, ranks tops with recruiting salaries for beginning instructors at $7,968.

"Some of our instructors, however, still get less than plumbers and construction workers on campus," said Hannah.

AS A MEANS of raising more monies, he said he hesitated to raise the enrollment fees which run an average $324 at MSU.

"Many of the 2,848 students from Oakland County could no doubt pay more for fees, but I don't think there is a way we could (specifically) charge these people more."

He cited the many dropouts for financial reasons.

"Somehow we must make certain that the least advantaged gets an education. This is the only way all youths start evenly."

A way of alleviating the problem, Hannah said, was to provide more "scholarship schemes."

In a question-and-answer session, Hannah admitted the need for streamlining education, but said that an MSU educational development program is investigating new efficiency methods such as television, teaching machines and increas-

ScheduleExam In Slaying of Twp. Woman

A Pontiac factory worker faces examination Wednesday in the murder of a 20-year-old Bloomfield Township woman whose body was found in a lovers' lane on the eastern edge of the city Sunday afternoon.

Police said Carl F. Foster, 28, has admitted beating and strangling to death Mrs. Maurice Crook, 2401 S. Telegraph, following a quarrel in which he told her he was going to marry another woman.

Mrs. Crook, the mother of a three-year-old son, had been living with the parents of her first husband, Mr. and Mrs. William D. Lynch, in an apartment behind the Miracle Mile shopping center in Bloomfield Township.

A divorce from her second husband, a private in the Army, would have become final on Monday.

Traffic Congestion At Drive-In Eyed By Highway Dept.

Two possible solutions to traffic congestion on Telegraph Road at the Miracle Mile Drive-in Theater have been suggested in a letter from state highway department. They are:

- "That the divider for the roadway leading to the theater be removed and this area be paved into a five-lane entrance and either four or five lanes can be utilized as storage for incoming vehicles."

- "Construction of an additional lane on Telegraph Road to accommodate northbound vehicles turning right into the theater. This will assist patrons in slowing down as well as allowing them to store prior to entering the drive to the theater."

ing the teacher-pupil ratio from 13:1 to 25:1.

"THERE IS little ahead for those who have only their strong backs and are willing to do what they are told. We need strong minds.

"Our universities must be competent so that our youngsters will have the kind of education to enable them to compete with scholars from other states," said Hannah.

Representatives from this area present at the meeting were William P. Hampton, William S. Huffman, Clifford H. Smart, Francis A. Crowley, Arthur J. Law and Robert J. Slingerland. Senators included Robert J. Huber and Sander M. Levin.

Fellows Take Annual Trip

The 1964-65 group of 48 Sloan Fellows at the Alfred P. Sloan School of Management, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, will spend Dec. 14-18 in New York City, meeting with chief executives of major U.S. corporations and financial institutions.

Purpose of the annual New York City Management Visit is to give the Sloan Fellows first-hand insight into problems of policy formation, management and control at top executive officer levels.

Sloan Fellows are executives with 10 years or more of management experience, who have been selected by M.I.T. and their companies for a year of intensive study in industrial management leading to an M.S. degree. The Sloan Program was started in 1931 and is financed, in part, by the companies the Fellows represent and, in part, by the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation.

Highlight of the trip will be a luncheon meeting at the Plaza Hotel on Tuesday with Alfred P. Sloan and officers of the Sloan Foundation. Sloan is now honorary Chairman of the Board of the General Motors Corp.
