Psychology Prof. Studies Problem Of Race Relations

Dr. Harvey Burdick, associate professor of psychology at Oakland University, speaking on "Psychological Implications of Race Relations," at the 14th annual meeting of Family Service said that when society adds to the socio-economic problems of the Negro, the stigma of their color, then society is responsible for the poor self-image of the Negro.

He may feel handicapped and his feeling of self worth and dignity which is adversely affected interfere with his striving and human desire to succeed. Society cannot give to the social agency the total job of revamping this problem, the speaker said.

Agencies such as Family Service can help with psychological adjustment problems but for basic change to occur it must be in the area of establishing social norms, he added.

Sixty to 70 per cent of our population is influenced by social norms and therefore society can change some of the basic problems in human relations by changing through social action and legislation to social norms of society, Burdick said.

Mail Gets Through— Snow or Not

In true post office tradition the mail got through in Birmingham—at least most of it did—despite Tuesday's freak snowstorm.

Postmaster Rollie Reese reported that except for a few routes in the urban areas the mail was delivered even though the carriers all were running late.

The post office experienced its greatest difficulty in the W. Maple area of Bloomfield Township.

• • •

REESE SAID 22 service calls were made by his towing vehicles in that area alone and some carriers were stuck in one spot for as long as two hours.

He said one unlucky postman had to be pulled out of the snow four times.

All of the foot carriers in the city of Birmingham got through although they were running two or three hours behind schedule.

Reese said this was the "first real trouble" his office had encountered because of the weather in several years.

He reported the post office garage crews worked through most of the night Tuesday to insure prompt delivery Wednesday.

IN BLOOMFIELD HILLS, where the terrain is hilly and curvy, Postmaster Herbert J. Dyble reports that his postmen came through with the "good old mail must go through spirit," even though some deliveries were two hours behind schedule.

Four mail trucks skidded into ditches but were soon rescued by wreckers, Dyble said.

"One truck couldn't get up a hill and brought a very small quantity of mail back to the post office," he said. "But, in view of the conditions, all employees did a fine job."

Fact—Did you know that Adolf Hitler dictated style? The Reich's fashion headquarters controlled all ready-to-wear clothing manufacturing.
