

Armed Forces Plan Week of Activities

Roland A. Mewhort, general chairman of the Metropolitan Detroit Armed Forces Week Committee, today announced the fullest program in Detroit history for the fiscal May 9-17 Armed Forces Week period.

"We believe the metropolitan Detroit program will be unmatched in the nation," said Mewhort, 1083 Chesterfield, Birmingham. Activities include: May 9—Open house sponsored by the U. S. Army at the Detroit Arsenal, Warren, with a junior fomp tower, motion pictures, jeep rides for children, a Special Forces helicopter demonstration, Army National Guard tank-infantry tactical demonstration, Army Reserve band, tours of laboratories and Tank Plant, tank crushing cars, and the MOCOM clowns.

May 10—Open house sponsored by the U. S. Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard at Grosse Ile Naval Air Station featuring a simultaneous attack on a fortified position by Marine Corps reservists, flights by Navy A1E Skyriders attack-bombers and helicopters, walk-throughs of aircraft, a rescue lift by a Coast Guard helicopter and motion pictures.

May 11—An admission-free Armed Forces Week band concert at the Ford Auditorium, starting at 8:30 p.m., featuring the U. S. Air Force Academy Band and the General Motors Chorus, Mrs. Lynn A. Townsend, 5991 Orchard Bend, Birmingham, is a member of the patrons committee for the concert.

May 14—Armed Forces Week luncheon at the Sheraton Cadillac Hotel featuring an address by Gen. Thomas S. Power, commander in chief, U. S. Strategic Air Command.

Detroit Future Bright, Says Adman

DETROIT—Detroit has the potential to become the capital of a vast strip city of 37 million people by the 1980's, Charles F. Adams, 6139 Dakota Circle, Birmingham, executive vice president of MacMannus, John & Adams, told a Wayne State University advertising industries marketing conference last Thursday.

The Detroit of the future, he said, will be strategically located at the center of a vast marketing area bounded by Green Bay, Wis. on the west; and Albany, N. Y. on the east; Bay City on the north, and Cincinnati on the south.

Then Adams posed this question: "Will Detroit or Chicago function as the regional capital for this coming Great Lakes urban complex?"

"IF PREDICTIONS of population growth and expansion patterns hold true," he pointed out, "these two cities will, by 1980, be in direct competition as the hub of the Green Bay-Albany-Bay City-Cincinnati metropolitan market."

Transportation—with our central location on the St. Lawrence Seaway; the second largest freeway system in the country and the best state highway system; the city's central location as an airline crossroads.

The second fastest-growing population in the country with a projected 17 per cent increase in the next decade.

The Detroit area is blessed, too, with a vast complex of cultural institutions including libraries, museums, art institutes, and auditoriums in Detroit's Cultural Center at Oakland University in Rochester, at Wayne State University, University of Detroit, at University of Michigan, and at Cranbrook. These facilities attract the "best minds" and help keep them in the area.

ADAMS ALSO POINTED to Detroit's rapidly expanding urban redevelopment, a banking system he called second to none, widely diversified industrial base, great research potential, impressive retail buying power, a burgeoning youth market that comprises 1,500,000 children and young people today. He also cited a rapidly expanding convention and tourist business with the biggest and best facilities in the country; considerable new industrial construction and a spate of new hotels, restaurants and recreational attractions, and an energetic burst of construction in commercial, medical, education, research, and port facilities.

"This does not mean that there will be one continuous city from Green Bay to Albany without any open land. Rather, it will be one continuous region with the majority of its population composed of urban communities interlocked with several neighboring communities in a long, endless chain.

"Presently, of course, the odds seem to favor Chicago. Detroit ranks second to its Lake Michigan neighbor in population, industrial construction and, in most of key indices of economic stature."

"AND YET, a really searching analysis of the future indicates that Detroit could take the honors—and lay claim to leadership in this great market in the years ahead."

"For we are making great strides forward—and at a much faster rate than many people might have imagined in the early 1960's."

"Detroit could replace Chicago as its importance to the over-

ADAMS THEN NOTED the factors he thinks favor Detroit's emergence as the Capital of the Great Lakes urban complex: A five-year drop in unemployment from 15.5 per cent of the area's population to 3.5 per cent most dramatic in the nation.

Forty per cent of Detroit's labor force is either skilled craft men or technicians—twice the national average.

Adams concluded "these signs are all good. Five years from now, or in 1980, Detroit should still be on the upward climb if all the accepted criteria for metropolitan success are valid."

Tomorrow Detroit could well be known as the great regional capital of the Midwest."
