

Doors Dress Up Shelves For Dust-Free Storage Still Time to Stop Crabgrass Growth

Looking for a simple way to spruce up those ordinary storage shelves in the kitchen or dining room and at the same time protect their contents from dust?

If so, try enclosing them with sliding fronts of plate glass, mirrors or pattern glass.

That's the advice of Ralph Sherwin, chief designer of Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Company, who points out that a protective glass front can mean dust and dirt-free storage for dishes, small appliances and even foods, while adding a "built-in" appearance to otherwise ordinary shelves.

"Converting open shelves to cabinets with sliding glass doors can be done by a do-it-yourself enthusiast with simple hand tools," Sherwin points out.

TO BEGIN WITH, cut 3/4-inch off the middle or "in between" shelves to allow clearance for the glass panels to slide.

Then mount inexpensive metal tracks on the protruding top and bottom shelves in which the glass panels can be mounted. If you prefer, grooves can be cut in the outboard shelves and used to hold the glass in place on the tracks.

Pre-cut panels of either Parallel-O-Plate glass or pattern glass are slid in so one extends beyond the other in width. End wood pieces, finished like the shelves, are then attached to make the cabinet a tight, rigid unit.

The need for handles can be eliminated by having the glass dealer grind finger grooves in the panels when you buy them. Or if you prefer, he can drill holes in the glass to fasten conventional grips.

WITH BOTH clear and translucent glass available, Sherwin explained it is a matter of personal preference which is used.

As a rule, however, where cabinets are used mainly for display of silver, vases and fine china, clear glass is used for the doors to show off the contents to full advantage.

When the cupboard is built against a wall as opposed to one which extends into the room to serve as a divider and provide access from both sides, backing each shelf with a piece of plate glass mirror will double the appeal and beauty of every article in the cabinet.

In the kitchen, where storage cabinets can become a catchall for all sorts of small appliances, assorted dishes, boxes and bags, Sherwin suggests using pattern glass or mirror.

Mirror Magic

If the bathroom in your home seems a little cramped, you can add a new feeling of depth and beauty just by installing a new medicine cabinet with large mirrors. The mirrors in the bathroom should be as large as possible to give the feeling of spaciousness. It works like magic in even the smallest bath.

IT GIVES the same sparkling modern appearance, while hiding the varying array of articles stored in it.

"With sliding glass cabinet doors, much of the maintenance of regular cabinets is eliminated," the designer noted. "Glass cannot warp or shrink, is impervious to dirt and wear, and requires only a rub with a damp cloth to return it to its original luster."

Still Time to Stop Crabgrass Growth

It's not too late to stop crabgrass this spring.

Due to the cool weather, germination of the first crabgrass seeds has been delayed.

Chemical pre-emergent crabgrass controls act as a barrier on the ground, killing the crabgrass seed as it germinates.

Although such chemicals may be applied after the first seeds germinate, they are more effective if used early according to most lawn experts.

The more seeds killed the less crabgrass in the lawn.
