

ONE HUNDRED YEARS OF PROGRESS

Used to be that to wash a few shirts meant chop the fire wood—build the fire—put on a big kettle of water to boil—get out the scrub board and go to work—hang 'em up—take 'em down—heat up an iron on the stove and get back to work. Took a couple of days and nobody expected them to look too good anyway. Nowadays you can drive right down to Birmingham Cleaners, drop them off, and four hours later pick up the cleanest, best-ironed shirts in town. Now that's progress.
