One of the largest crowds ever to assemble in Birmingham is expected to be on hand Saturday for the Centennial Day celebration. Since the observance began on May 15, it has been estimated that nearly 14,000 people have taken part in the various events and Michigan Week activities.

After witnessing the popularity of the first activities, civic officials are optimistic about the events still to be held.

The program continues with the Heritage Day tour of historic sites and old homes Friday morning and the Heritage Day Roundup Sunday at the Community House. The latter will be hosted by the Birmingham Historical Society.

Birmingham Mayor Charles W. White, president of the Centennial Committee, said the Centennial Day programs for Saturday at the Civic Auditorium and at the nearby City Park will be the most spectacular programs of the week.

The final event will be the Centennial Day Roundup at the Community House, where a series of programs will be given.

The quiet circus will feature a number of circus acts and will include a parade of floats, a fireworks display, a street dance and a horse show.
