Carry the Word Home

The TIME is here for the citizens of Birmingham to do something about the threat they have in the past the responsibility of the future. We stand at the crossroads. The citizens will determine which road we take.-The city council and the mayor have an opportunity to make the new city an enthralling of the heritage we now offer. They will have to give claims or the road to danger and ruin.

We urge the residents of Birmingham and the area to familiarize themselves with the problems. The council, this town will make them to give those plans our whole-hearted and enthusiastic support.

This NEWSPAPER, in an effort to recognize our own responsibility, promises to really that it can, as accurately inform the public and to offer leadership and guidance through our editorial columns.

We believe in the wisdom and soundness of the CCB proposals and will make every effort to tell the public. The political development of council, we will, of course, do nothing to the public and can not interfere with.

But we cannot do the job alone. There must be other means of communicating the public. And all those who believe in those efforts will be urged to acquaint themselves with the facts and to carry the message.

As a COMMUNITY, we cannot stand by and we buy for a miracle. If we are to get the Birmingham that all of us want for our children the type of flavor and character to which we want to point pride, we must act now.

We must plan now for tomorrow; to make it a Birmingham which is a reflection of the Birmingham of today with pride, and an improvement of the community values.

The things that we hold so dearly today.

So, the next step is one of informing the people of what is going on and to carry the message to the city's children.

Let us carry the message home, to encourage citizen action on the home level.

On Memorial Day

Unfortal the Flag! Blue, white and red. To glorify our Soldier dead.

From every freeman's heart should pour A laurel to the heroes of our land. Over this broad land, from sea to sea, Today, there still reverberate Liberty. This Flag that waves against the sky Is symbol of ideals—ever high. Brave men in air, on land and sea Vibrant with pride for you and me! Unraised, unsailed, it has flown The highest flag that man has known. Where human hearts are filed with love Where earth is green, blue sky above. Where men find peace who have shed Old Glory's on the side of God! Bland forth the trumpet, sound the fife Place the laurel where it is due To those remembered on this Day.

May men and women, boys and girls, Come to their homes and on that day Hearts that are filled with thankfulness For such Memorial—Day of Days! -George H. Averitt

Criticizes Ecentic's Use of Postal Service

LETTER-CARRIERS, as the exclusive agents of the Post Office Department, have the responsibility of seeing that the mails are delivered to all and the public is served efficiently. Obviously, the system must be so organized that all of the public is served equally. It is just as unfair to the public for letter carriers to work overtime and deliver the mail on Sundays as it is to allow them to work overtime and deliver the mail for free on holidays. I am appalled that any such situation could occur.

There is, unfortunately, one device that has been employed by some of the Ecentic's carriers in order to avoid this situation. It is to cover pay envelopes with a large, white, plastic bag, which is then delivered through the mail. This is not only an illegal practice but it is also a violation of the law. I demand that this situation be corrected immediately. I will not continue to support a publication that engages in such practices.

Lending Writer Adds To Hunter History

To the Editor:

I am a writer of books and have been a hunter for most of my life. I have always been interested in the history of hunting and I have written several articles on the subject. I am also a member of the National Rifle Association and I am a strong supporter of the Second Amendment.

I was recently asked by a publisher to write a book on the history of hunting in the United States. I accepted the offer and began researching the subject. I have been able to uncover some interesting facts about the history of hunting in the United States, and I am excited to share them with my readers.

I hope that you will enjoy reading my book, and that it will help to bring to light some of the important events and figures in the history of hunting.

Sincerely,

Missions where Rev. Peter Deary-

THAT MAY 20, 1931

An interesting array of lovely Missionaries, from all areas of the world, were brought to the Birmingham area for the first time. The Missionaries, who hail from countries as far apart as China, Africa, and South America, were welcomed by the people of Birmingham with open arms. The Missionaries were greeted with songs, dances, and gifts as they arrived at the airport. They were then taken to the hotel where they would be staying for the rest of their stay.

The Missionaries were scheduled to give talks on their countries and cultures, as well as to share their experiences with the people of Birmingham. They were also scheduled to visit local schools and hospitals, and to participate in various community events.

In addition to the Missionaries, there were also other groups that came to Birmingham for the conference. These included a group of theologians, who were discussing the role of religion in society, and a group of social workers, who were working on issues related to poverty and inequality.

Despite the busy schedule, the Missionaries and their guests found time to relax and enjoy each other's company. They also took the opportunity to explore Birmingham, visiting some of the city's attractions and learning about its history.

Overall, the conference was a great success, and it was clear that the Missionaries and their guests had a deep appreciation for the hospitality they received in Birmingham. They were all looking forward to coming back again in the future.

The missionaries and their guests were then taken back to the airport, where they boarded their planes and headed home. It had been an unforgettable experience, and everyone was already planning their next visit.
