Decorating Is Their Delight

The urge to "do over" a room or a whole house has become a national pastime of the distaff side. Let Dad have his power mower and his work shop and his cookout paraphernalia . . . but stay out of my parlor, she decrees. Every woman seems to fancy herself as a born decorator, the researchers say, but never before in history could so many women afford to indulge their inclinations. It remained a hidden talent until prices came within the reach of all. FURNITURE selections throughout the country are now so varied and so reasonably priced (in comparison with years past) that the average homemaker can now exercise her impulse to be her own decorator. The ingredients are now more abundantly available than ever before. And if it's difficult to distinguish Judy O'Grady from the paragon, it's equally as difficult in the living room. Clever and original room arrangements are to be seen everywhere. THE TYPICAL furniture store or furniture department features a marvelous conglomeration of styles and designs—contemporary, Early American, traditional, French Court, French Provincial, Italian, transitional, Mediterranean, etc.

Designers have found inspiration in every page of furniture design history. And carpet, fabrics, paint, wallpaper and building materials experts have come up with correlated schemes to suit every taste imaginable. FURNITURE retailers have assembled model rooms and vignettes to show furniture in use, and home-makers look to these displays for ideas to help them in their own homes. Although few of these "set pieces" are over accepted 100 per cent intact, women pick up an idea here, an idea there and evolve a decor that's original and adapted to their own needs.

Dauber for Doors

Use a shoe dauber or old toothbrush for painting under doors or fence edges. This type of work is usually very hard on good paint brushes, and an excellent job can be done with this improvised tool without harm to your favorite brush.
