Expert tells how to exercise properly

ANY PHYSIOLOGIST will tell you that in exercise it's rhythm, duration, speed and overall body action that count most. A few slow motions where only one part of the body is moved at a time are not effective. In exercise avoid stress, strain and after-pain; avoid motor-driven devices that run too fast for you; avoid exerting yourself beyond your natural limitations. Use a simple, inexpensive manual exerciser such as this; one that you run yourself, with both rowing and cycling actions considered the best motions for over-all body conditioning; one that's engineered for the human system; not a toy or gadget. Use it daily. First slowly and gently; later faster and vigorously. Exercise such as this will help you in a hundred different ways.
