College Shop Opens In Time for Season

Saks Fifth Avenue's college shops opens Monday, advised by a board of over forty men and women from leading schools across the nation, thoroughly acquainted with the ins and outs of university attire.

They will be promoting the casual trend in college fashion that pares clothes to their basic lines, colors and fabrics: Silhouettes follow the body in movement; fabrics shed their fluff, snag and bulk; and colors are toned down to neutral.

The college representatives in the Young Elite Shops will wear multicolored Irish tweed skirts with Tom Jones blouses, topped by sleeveless sweater-vests.

The male members of the board will be attired in a natural whipcord suit that is vested and lap-seamed, in a maize, buttoned-down shirt, and a regimental tie.

THE MEN will inform their peers of the brighter sports jackets, the bolder plaids, the ubiquitous heather tones, and the vividly striped ties that will enliven the campus this year. Tweed suits and shetland cabled sweaters are as popular as ever, while blazers stray from their conventional navy into more colorful pastures.

Costs are skinnier and narrower, adhering to the age-old axiom that the shortest distance between the shoulders and the knees is a straight line. For a tight fit at the waist, belts are slung around.

When shoulder tabs and a double row of buttons are added, the trenchcoat strides onto the scene again. This year, however, it is coupled with matching slacks, which steals all attention for itself.

THE "PANTS LOOK" dominates fashion this year, underscoring sweaters, blouses, coats and suits. Wherever they are found, they too adopt the narrow and tapered lines of their outfit.

Sitting attentively at classes, lolling lazily in the dormitory, chatting amiably in the cafeteria, dancing dizzily in the lounge, the college girl still swears by her sweaters.

This year, however, they are flat and smooth, rippling over the body with comfort and ease. In fact, the surfaces of all fabrics have been moved lovely, just like the best-groomed lawn.

Nap has been elbowed out by design. Plaids, herringbones, and tweeds dominate the wools, while a tortoise finish illuminates vinyls and leathers. Colors are neutral and muted, with camel outdistancing them all.

STRIKING THE mean point between the sporty and the dressy is the eternal wool suit. It glides gracefully from the afternoon football game to the evening dinner date. This year it is carved just like the coat-out of straight lines.

Jackets are either cropped and fitted, or long and belted. It is particularly, chic and practical when made of wide-wale corduroy, extremely popular this year.

one pleasant thing about ARTHRITIS

the delicious, spring-pure water many doctors recommend as an aid for the relief of arthritic symptoms

Many people like Mountain Valley Water so much they drink it for taste sake alone. This is the best tasting water anywhere. You can drink all your body needs (6 to 8 glasses a day) without discomfort because Mountain Valley Water is light to the taste... never bloats. It is mildly diuretic, non-laxative.

Mention Mountain Valley Water when you visit your doctor. Direct delivery to your door.
