Residents Ask Study Of Mohegan Traffic

A request for traffic relief on Mohegan between Adams and Poppleton was referred to the administration and police department for study by Birmingham city commissioners Monday night.
 Commissioners turned over to City Manager L. R. Gare and Chief of Police Ralph W. Moxley a letter signed by Arthur J. Underwood, Jr., and 20 other residents.
 "We . . . have become increasingly alarmed about the volume of automobile traffic on our street," the letter read. "It is our hope that some means can be found to return this street to its residential nature, which it enjoyed but a few years ago."
 "Since the placement of the traffic light at Mohegan and Adams, our block of Mohegan has attracted large volume of traffic from the N. Adams area and from the east side via Derby."

THE RESIDENTS contended that their street "has become a convenient thoroughfare for people outside the area to reach downtown Birmingham, while avoiding traffic lights on Adams at Oakland and Maple."
 The experimental closing of Oakland in front of Adams School would bring an even heavier traffic volume over the Mohegan-Poppleton route, they stressed.
 They cited speed as part of the problem.
 The residents offered four suggestions to help solve the problem:

1. Close Mohegan at Adams so that no through traffic can use the street.
2. Prohibit right turns at Mohegan from southbound Adams traffic carried at Adams for eastbound Mohegan traffic.
3. Prohibit left turns from Mohegan onto Poppleton for westbound traffic and right turns onto Mohegan for northbound traffic on Poppleton.
4. Make every corner on Poppleton from Mohegan to Oakland a stop street.

B'field Hills High Begins Program In Job Training

This fall a program begins in Bloomfield Hills to provide special training for the 20 per cent of Bloomfield Hills High School graduates who don't go on to college.
 Earl Halvas, vocational education coordinator, now is canvassing for jobs for the 17 seniors who enrolled in the program.
 The new program is a combined effort by the school and the local business community to provide business students with meaningful on-the-job training and realistic up-to-date related classroom instruction.

THE PROGRAM is available to those seniors who have a foundation in one or more of the following subjects: typing, shorthand, bookkeeping, office machines and filing.
 The students have been accepted for the program after a screening process which included information about their academic and skill background, attendance records and personality.
 These students will have to earn the usual 14 units of credit toward graduation during their three years in the high school, but two of these units will be earned by participation in the Cooperative Training Program—one unit for the related instruction portion (a class in office practice) and one unit for the job experience.
