Group Aiding Retarded Initiates Fund Drive

New Horizons, a nonprofit organization dedicated to providing work opportunities for mentally retarded young people, has begun its membership and fund drive.

Stanford Wallace of Huntington Woods, president of the community action group, said it aims to enlist 5,000 contributing members in Oakland County.

"WE HAVE NOT set a specific goal," Wallace said, "because the more people we are able to raise, the more people we will be able to put on the road to leading a useful and productive life. We will call upon individuals, civic organizations and trusts and foundations for financial support," he said.

In charge of individual solicitations is J. Lyle Winslow of Birmingham. Chairman of the civic organization effort is Dr. James Roe of Huntington Woods. R. James Theodoroff of Birmingham will lead the campaign to raise money from trusts and foundations.

New Horizons is now negotiating for a building to house its workshop where mentally-retarded teenagers and young adults will be given vocational training and sheltered employment. The organization has hired a full time executive director, Charles Nelson, formerly of Grand Rapids, with an extensive background in special education and school administration.

New Horizons' work activities center will have a professional staff, supplemented by trained volunteers, who will build a vocation development program geared to the maximum potential of each trainee, Wallace said.

"BY ENLISTING the cooperation of existing private and public agencies, New Horizons will attempt job placement and follow-up for those trainees capable of outside employment. Those who can't qualify will be occupied usefully in the centers' workshop."

"The business there will work in an atmosphere closely resembling ordinary working conditions and will be paid wages matching their ability. Presently, no program of this kind for the mentally handicapped exists in Oakland County," Wallace said.

He pointed out that New Horizons will seek out contracts from industrial and commercial firms as a means of providing work for the trainees and a source of operating income.

"While it is doubtful we will be able to relieve the community of a great financial burden while helping the retarded to realize their potentials," he pointed out that work training and sheltered employment can be successfully accomplished at from one third to one half less the cost of confinement in already overcrowded state institutions.

"WITH SOME 25,000 mentally retarded persons in Oakland County alone, many of them in their teens and early 20's, there is a tremendous opportunity for doing something of real value for these people through New Horizons," he said.

The Junior-League of Birmingham has already pledged its support of New Horizons by making a "seed" money grant of $24,000 to be paid over the next three years. New Horizons has also received some funds from members of its 25-member board of directors and through memorial gifts.

Temporary offices have been donated by George R. Stribb, of Automotive Conversion Corp., in his plant at 2191 Cole Street, Birmingham. Persons interested in supporting New Horizons may reach the director there.

State Begins Fight Against Tuberculosis

A guiding role in shaping a state-wide shift in tuberculosis control measures in order to intensify the battle against the disease has been assigned State Rep. Raymond L. Baker (R) of Farmington.

He has been named a member of an eight-man joint senate-house legislative committee on tuberculosis. The committee is charged with making recommendations for changes in state laws governing tuberculosis detection and treatment.

Among the documents filed with the committee were proposals for revising tuberculosis control programs recommended by a seven-man Task Force on Tuberculosis assigned by the U.S. Surgeon General last winter.

THE TASK Force report predicts that if tuberculosis control measures are intensified according to its proposals, the annual costs of tuberculosis to taxpayers in the nation would be reduced by one-half after a decade. Otherwise, the Task Force contended, expenditures will remain at about the present level.

In two meetings in the State Capitol in July, the committee heard testimony from 15 authorities. The next meeting is scheduled for Sept. 9 and the committee plans to submit proposals to the legislature when it convenes for the 1966 session, Rep. Baker said.

Two major issues face the committee, he said.

ONE IS whether or not to recommend to the legislature that the state increase the $4 per day subsidy for tuberculosis patient treatment paid to counties. The sum was stipulated in 1954 legislation and since that time, costs of treatment have about doubled and county officials throughout the state are supporting a move to increase the amount to at least $6 per day.

State Health Commissioner Albert E. Heustis and John L. Ishister, who as chief of the cardio-pulmonary division at the Michigan Department of Health directs the state TB control program, said they would favor the increase provided counties spend the money to improve TB control services.

The second major issue is whether or not the state should appropriate funds to improve follow-up care of discharged tuberculosis patients, thus trying to reduce the number of relapse cases requiring hospitalization.

B'HAM ECENTRIC Thursday, August 27, 1964 Page 5-C

BOTH DR. Ishister and Winthrop N. Davey, M.D., of Ann Arbor, president-elect of the American Thoracic Society, whose members are physicians specializing in treatment of chest diseases, urged the committee to favor an appropriation for out-patient care.

They reported that one of every six persons hospitalized for tuberculosis is a relapse case and urged that funds be provided to assure a five-year follow-up of all tuberculosis patients discharged from hospitals.

Dr. Davey, whose service on the Task Force on Tuberculosis, said the follow-up program is an essential part of the campaign to halve the costs of tuberculosis control in the next decade.

Also under consideration by the committee are proposals to inaugurate special projects to intensify tuberculosis control such as providing x-ray services for all persons admitted to large general hospitals and use of BCG vaccine in metropolitan areas where incidence is high.

The question of whether or not the state should continue to operate existing sanatoriums in Hancock and Kalamazoo also is being considered.
