Junior Members To Study Science On Trips in Field

Animals, plants, fossils and minerals will be studied by Junior Members of Cranbrook Institute of Science when they participate in the Saturday morning field expeditions this fall.

The excursions are open to junior members 11 years of age and older. There is a registration fee. Young people who are not members may join the institute and register for the expeditions at the same time.

THE FIRST TRIP Sept. 12 will take the young scientists to Camp Obiqua on Fish Lake for the study of fungi and quaking bogs. They will visit Point Pelee Sept. 19, Kensington Park Sept. 26, Arkona and Kettle Point Oct. 3 and Metamora Oct. 10.

Walter Nickell, institute naturalist, will lead the trips which begin at 9 a.m. Registrations are necessary and may be made by mail or telephone weekdays.
