PUZZLE NO. 825

ART FOR ART'S SAKE

Top Award Goes To B'ham Painter

"I got the best-of-show award at the Royal Oak Association Exhibition," bubbled Mary Beard into the phone. She went on to describe her pretty daughter Nancy's busy teen-age life with equal enthusiasm.

Mary Beard is a serious artist and slightly fey mother. Her involvements are with people and art. Nothing else is really worth trying to remember.

Mrs. Beard has studied variously at Arts and Crafts School, Cranbrook Academy of Art and the Bloomfield Art Association. As a member of the hydroids' group she painted textured relief paintings under the aegis of Jerry Kanewski.

Her work is shown in the Abba Artz Gallery in New York, Cornell's Gallery in Detroit and Jacobson's Gallery of Fine Arts of Birmingham.

This year she won awards at the Detroit Freedom Festival, the Scarab Club and the Royal Oak exhibition which opened Monday and continues until Saturday at the Royal Oak Public Library.

The Royal Oak show has grown in stature and presents a lively show. One hundred and fifty artists responded to the society's invitations. Of these, 105 works were selected by jurors Guy Pradzewski, of the University of Michigan and Don Willett of Cranbrook.

THE SPECIFIC designation of prizes proclaimed a mixed bag showing. There were awards for representational work, contemporary, student, design and male or female work.

Mary Beard's best-of-show winner is a dark richly textured collage of warmth and depth.

Sculptures by Jafar Shida won the first outstanding award and were equally professional in concept and execution.

The prize for representational work was won by Helen Cartmell with a romantic portrait skillfully sketched in oil. The contemporary prize winner is Irene Cichow.

Edward Pradzewski of Birmingham won the award for a new approach with a lively black and white ink drawing of contrived random effect. Aimee Giffen, also of Birmingham, won the color award.

PERENNIAL FAVORITE Sheila Burns won a prize for her water color of flowers and pots that managed to appeal to the professional in technique and the layman in style.

Some of the works are amateur or derivative. This is not surprising for several reasons. Beginning painters have to learn their craft some way, and painting after the fashion of an admired professional is one of them.

Secondly, although there is a fearful premium on novelty these days, there are only just so many ways to paint with a lot of people painting.

Generally, the show exhibits a fine use of color with an interest in draughtsmanship—both traditionally important aspects of painting.

Mrs. Gale Cummings, as chairman of the show, is pleased with the exhibition. She hopes that great crowds of people will see the show as well as the Royal Oak mall show running concurrently Friday and Saturday.

Other prize winners were Mark McNaughten, Nancy Kern, Howard Wilmet and myself.

Cranbrook Plans Art Courses

Enrollments for the fall term of adult drawing and painting classes, sponsored by the Cranbrook Academy of Art Galleries, are being accepted.

Classes will meet for ten weeks from 8 to 10 p.m. on Wednesdays beginning Sept. 23 in the room below the Library.

The course is planned for adults who have had some previous instruction in the basic techniques of visual art. The fall semester is oriented to acquaint the student with the creative processes and students select media. Studio sessions will be complemented with lectures and discussions.

Registration and payment of tuition must be completed by Sept. 28.
